Doro joins leading sector organizations

Swedish telecom company Doro has secured membership of the GSM Association (a global sector organization) and the European organization Mobile Alley, which are dedicated to encouraging innovation in the mobile telecom sector. Through these memberships, Doro has strengthened its commitment to the development of GSM technology and to solutions developed for user-friendly handsets.

The GSM Association was founded in 1982 by the European Conference of Postal and Telecommunications Administrations (CEPT) to design and develop pan-European mobile technology. Today, the organization represents the interests of the worldwide mobile communications industry with the objective of supporting and developing future products and technology.

"Doro has more than 30 years of experience in telecommunications and, in the past couple of years, we have launched a number of new GSM-models specially designed for seniors," says the President and CEO of Doro, Jérôme Arnaud. "Our membership of the GSM Association gives us a seat among other leading producers of mobile phones. It corresponds to our newly established position among this industry."

In December, Doro has also joined the recently launched organization Mobile Alley alongside other senior players in the European mobile telecom sector. The organization's central objectives include encouraging innovation in the European mobile telecom sector and fostering the next generation of mobile entrepreneurs through collaboration between established actors and emerging companies.

"Through Mobile Alley, Doro, as a Swedish company, will contribute to the ethics and dynamic vision of the European mobile sector while also gaining access to an exciting network and the latest thinking on technological trends," comments Jérôme Arnaud.
