

Press release

Lund, May 4, 2012

page 1 of 1

Doro loses dispute with Fysics of the Netherlands

A court in The Hague in the Netherlands has dismissed Doro's suit claiming infringement of its intellectual rights. While the court found no cause to question the validity of Doro's registrations, it did not find that a specific telephone from a local supplier Fysics represented an infringement.

Jérôme Arnaud, President and CEO of Doro, says in a comment: "We work intensively and continuously with innovation, design and branding. That is why we also promptly and consistently challenge all infringements that might threaten our intellectual property rights. Earlier in 2011, we won three cases but this time the similarities have been judged too small by the Court. We won't comment on Court's decision and keep our confidence in the strong international protection we have built up regarding our intellectual property."

For more information, please contact:

President and CEO Jérôme Arnaud, +46 (0)46 280 50 05, or Vice President and CFO Annette Borén, +46 (0)706 30 00 09.

This is information that Doro AB (publ) is required to publish in accordance with the Swedish Securities Markets Act and/or the Swedish Financial Trading Act. This information was submitted for publication on May 4, 2012 at 13:00 p.m. CET.

About Doro

Doro, the leader in the telecom care market, is a Swedish public company. With over 38 years of experience in the telecom industry, the company focuses on developing, marketing and selling products, software, TeleCare and mHealth solutions specially adapted to the growing worldwide population of seniors. Doro's range of easy-to-use mobile phones is unmatched and its unique know-how has been recognized through several international design awards. The company's products are sold in more than 30 countries on five continents. In FY 2011 revenue totalled SEK 745 m. Doro's shares are quoted on the Nasdaq OMX Stockholm exchange, Nordic list, Small companies. Read more about Doro at www.doro.com.